Plant Wyant Roses This Fall

THE BEST TIME TO PLANT IS IN THE FALL AND THE BEST
ROSES TO PLANT ARE WYANT ROSES

Roses planted in the fall start growth at the normal time in the spring and will give you better results the first year than those planted in the spring can possibly do.

Carefully studied reports from thousands of our customers establish October 20 to November 20 as the best time to plant Wyant Roses in this latitude. The soil and weather conditions are much more favorable then and, if the simple planting instructions enclosed with each order are followed, there is very little danger of winter losses.

Fall planting brings you the pick of the crop; the plants are freshly dug, and you are sure of getting the variety you want.

If you have planted Wyant Roses you know the quality; if you are not a customer, a trial order will convince you that there are no better Roses grown than those produced here in our Mentor Nursery.

We grow Roses not only to make a living but because we love them, and all of our energy is expended in growing the best plants of the best varieties we can find.

The rugged Mentor climate takes care of all the weaklings, so that we cannot afford to grow anything but the best.

Through contracts with the introducers we now grow many of the patented varieties ourselves, so you are assured of quality plants of these as well as of the unpatented varieties.

We bud on both seedlings and cuttings, both types producing fine, branched, well-formed root systems.

Order now for fall planting. Price-list is enclosed.

Wyant Roses are Easy to Grow

Fall planting always gives the best results but in order to assure more complete success plant the bushes about 15 inches apart in the best soil that is obtainable. Rotten manure and Bone-meal are very good soil builders; mix them in the soil.

Planting directions accompany all orders but an important caution is to heap soil high (10 inches) around the branches of all roses as soon as they are planted. The bank of soil remains there until spring.

The best bushes that have been grown for years are available this fall. Replace the weak plants in your rose bed now and have a good looking rose bed next year.
